Faculty assured of 12-percent pay raise

By Cathy Kradolfer
Montana Kaimin Legislative Reporter

HELENA — University faculty will receive their promised 12-percent pay increase even if it means borrowing from administrative budgets to do so, a representative for the commissioner of higher education said yesterday.

"The faculty will get their 12 percent — no question — it just means we might have to take it (money) out of other areas," said Jack Noble, deputy commissioner of fiscal affairs and a member of the management bargaining team.

Faculty salaries still must be negotiated by the administration and the University Teachers' Union, but the Legislature settled the question of how much will be available to bargain with by passing the major appropriations bill for state agencies yesterday. Both houses agreed to give $1.6 million to the university system to make up for an expected deficit caused by its pay plan.

With the additional money, faculty can be assured they will receive "at least" the 12-percent increase the Board of Regents has been recommending all along, Noble said.

The increase, which includes health and retirement benefits, "will keep us even with the cost of living — almost — for a change," according to Howard Reinhardt, president of the UTU. Faculty received about a 6-percent increase during this school year.

And, while he emphasized that the final salary figure still must be negotiated, Reinhardt said the chances for a 12-percent increase for both years of the biennium are "very good."

The remaining question is whether the $1.6 million the Legislature added yesterday will be enough to cover the 12-percent raises without having to dip into other non-instructional budgets.

The $1.6 million was added after university supporters argued a 3.5-percent "vacancy savings factor" in the Republican pay plan would short the university system.

The system has a much lower vacancy savings factor because it must offer certain classes and therefore cannot leave positions unfilled.

The $1.6 million would have been enough to cover the vacancy savings shortfall except for a problem with the wording of the amendment, which included research faculty in the various experiment stations of universities among those eligible for the money. Doing so would leave the system short $1.2 million, forcing it to offer either lower salary increases or dip into maintenance or administrative budgets, Noble said.

But, if intent counts for anything, the money will be spent only for instructional — not research — faculty.

During debate on both the House and Senate floors, sponsors of the amendment said the money is intended to cover instruction faculty only.

Noble said he would prefer to see the amendment changed to make the intent clear. But, he added, "no matter how they word it, the faculty will still get what they've been promised."

UM will meet semifinalists

By Heidi Bender
Montana Kaimin Reporter

During the next four days, two of the semifinalists for the University of Montana presidency will arrive on campus to meet with faculty, students and staff. Richard Bowen, distinguished professor of political science at the University of South Dakota, will be on campus tomorrow and Saturday. Garry Hays, chancellor of the Minnesota State University System, will visit UM on Sunday and Monday.

At separate meetings, areas such as academic programs, research and student affairs at UM will be discussed with the semifinalists.

UM representatives from each area will lead the discussions, which are open to all university members.

The public meetings with Bowen are scheduled:

- Friday, 9 a.m., academic programs, Chemistry-Pharmacy 202.
- 10 a.m., research, Chemistry-Pharmacy 202.

UC food rip-offs are on the rise

By Diana Pellgrini
Montana Kaimin Reporter

"Help!!!" the sign in the University Center Copper Commons says.

"The University Center Food Service needs your help in controlling the theft of food. The cost of rip-offs must be reflected in prices. Please do not consume food or beverages or remove them from public view until they are paid for. Thank you for your assistance and cooperation."

Put up in the Copper Commons last quarter, the sign is an attempt to alert the public to the problem of people stealing food from the Copper Commons, Steve Barclay, UC Food Service director, said yesterday.

The problem of people consuming food without paying for it has existed for quite a few years, but over the past year or so, it has gotten worse, Barclay said. "This could just be a reflection of the economic times," he said.

He said he expects about $2,000 to $3,000 worth of food to be stolen this year, but that he could not estimate how much has been stolen in the past. Apples, wrapped sandwiches, cookies and beverages are the most common food items taken, he added.

When people are seen eating food without first having paid for it, they are asked to wait until they have paid, Barclay said. "It is not our intent to hassle anyone, we just want to make sure that people pay for what they take," he added.

The hours between 11:30 a.m. and 1 p.m. are when most thefts occur, Barclay said. This period is when Copper Commons employees are concentrating on serving their customers quickly and do not have time to watch everyone, he said.

Barclay could not say what effect the signs are having on curbing thefts, but added that there does seem to be an increased awareness of the problem.

CB rejects library fee

By Susan Toft
Montana Kaimin Reporter

A $2 fee that students would have paid at registration to buy library books was rejected 14-7 by Central Board last night, but a motion to reconsider the proposal at the last CB meeting of the quarter passed.

The proposal would have provided for a library acquisitions committee to disburse funds for book purchases. The proposal had to pass CB in order to proceed to the Board of Regents for approval.

Opponents of the fee argued that its passage would perhaps set a "dangerous precedent" of taking over the Legislature's job of funding the university and its functions.

Also, some members said it is unknown how much of the general student body supports the proposal. Petitions containing signatures of students supporting the proposal were lost when a backpack they were in was stolen from the Lodge Food Service. The petitions were never recovered.

Members of the board agreed to consult students before the proposal is reconsidered.

CB also approved a special allocation of $855 for the Kyi-Yo Indian Club for security at its youth conference this weekend.

The club had requested only enough funds during 1979-80 budgeting to pay one security officer. In the past, only one officer has been on duty during the festivities at the Harry Adams Field House. But Ken Willett, campus security chief, said because of the amount of incidents occurring during larger activities at the field house, the number of security officers on duty recently has been raised.

Gary Hughes, director of athletic activities and revenue at the field house, originally asked that 10 officers be on duty at the conference, but the number was later amended to five.

CB voted to provide funds for three officers, with representatives from the Kyi-Yo Club agreeing to try to find tribal police to volunteer to patrol the event.

ASUM President Steve Spaulding said he wants to stress to ASUM-funded groups that CB

President search and budgeting important to UM

Two very important activities are taking place at the University of Montana that need student participation and observation.

Tonight, starting at 6, Central Board budgeting subcommittees will be hearing formal budget requests from 51 university-related groups.

Also, tomorrow through Monday, two presidential semifinalists will be on campus to discuss academic programs and student affairs.

Earlier this week, wild-eyed students stalked the Montana Rooms, earnestly lobbying CB members for money for their group.

But 20 CB members are responsible for doling out over $450,000 of student fees. It is a large and time-consuming task, as any CB member will confirm.

However, this is not a task that needs to be assumed fully by CB members. They were elected at large by the student body, and students should contribute to CB activities and meetings regularly. Almost one-half a million dollars is not a meager sum, especially when it comes out of the students' pockets.

CB members are responsible to you, but they can't act on assumptions. Help them out. Go to the hearings tonight and contribute. Have a say in how your money is spent.

The second event students should attend is any one of the meetings scheduled with the UM presidential semifinalists.

Richard Bowen, a professor at the University of South Dakota, and Garry Hays, chancellor of the Minnesota State University System, will field questions from faculty, staff and students.

Evaluation forms will be handed out to those attending, and will be used by the presidential search committee in judging the candidates, so your attendance is not inconsequential.

Students need to be more involved in the operation of their student government and in the university's administration. Too often both hear nothing but complaints. Here is the opportunity to participate, to make a difference in how things are run.

Use it. It's to your advantage.

Peace avocation

Editor: Popular organizing for peace should be recognized first as just that. It takes place in conjunction with other things, or on the weekend and in the evenings. War and preparation for war are vocational activities. Working nine-to-five and on the scale of multi-billion dollar industries, armed forces and research programs hardly compare with avocational endeavor by a minority. To even up the balance a bit demands consideration of species. It takes two nations to make an arms race or a war. It takes two opposed nations. The efforts of the opposed nations frustrate each other and, in sum, come to nothing. It takes one species to make peace. Peace efforts are compatible and add up. So far as species is the judge, there is a significant peace movement and no war movement at all. The difference is between millions of lives given to and gotten from something futile and the dispersed peace minorities joined by a great and lasting purpose.

In these circumstances it is easy to see why the support for peace takes many different forms. A great purpose touches many other motives, interests and associations. Peace is related to our hopes for our children, and also to our hopes for the environment. A church mission in El Salvador results in concern over U.S. arms shipments to that country and in harrowing truths of the martyrdom of nuns. An interest in politics cannot go far without meeting the fact that guns exist at the expense of bread for the starving. Science touches the issue of peace in obvious and in less expected ways. How much less oil exploration is needed when military consumption of fossil fuels is subtracted? Certainly enough to save wilderness habitat from exploration.

Is civil disobedience excessive? Is the martyrdom of nuns excessive? A better approach to these censorious concerns considers the people involved. I do not believe the nuns in El Salvador would have objected if Linda Sue Ashton had sought their approval for her approach to 'the fence-straddlers'. I am hard pressed to think of anybody who is concerned for peace objecting if she wishes to join with those already engaged in 'presenting coherent, scientific reports and data'. I suggest that Ashton try to see peace a bit differently. Its organization is not just a carbon copy of organization for war. War organization is huge, centralized, ideological and futile. Peace organization is according to greatness of purpose, not of size. This species' purpose touches other purposes and touches them all the surer when they have already grown in their own kind. If Ashton will follow out her own sense of purpose, then being true to its deeper tendency will, I am sure, let her find where her own peace avocation lies.

Aber Day plans

Editor: Howdy students, faculty, departments, other university characters and community folks: Aber Day lives! This letter is to remind you that Aber Day, Wed., May 6, is brought to you by other students who wish you well; and who want to invite you to participate in Aber Day in a variety of ways. These options include recycling, land rejuvenation, social revitalization of the community-university relationship, arts and crafts on the Oval.

Aber Day began in 1915, except for a short period of time, it has continued to this year. It is important for the university to maintain this tradition as it exemplifies some of the better qualities evident in our society, therefore it is a way to truly blend this encapsulated world of the campus with the greater community. The aims, goals, ideals of this Aber Day effort are in tune with claims of people who sponsor the concept of harmonious living with nature.

Our work on that day will be to replant, seed, replenish and rejuvenate. Our play will be "light" rock and roll, bluegrass, jazz, blended with the arts, crafts and community-related workshops. All in all, if our student population stays around that day (it's a holiday) and parties the day together, it would be an exceptionally fine time. One day a year to spend "mixing" in a relaxed manner would be much like an all-day-noon-hour. New games, hacky-sack and frisbee will be part of the day.

The Library Run will end on the Oval. Awards will be presented for the Library Run winners and after that, the First Annual Aber Day Award will be presented to University of Montana President Richard Bowers. It will be an award given in a positive manner to President Bowers for the positive efforts of this term here at UM.

We are currently looking for scholarship funds to go with this award, and it would work in this way: an Aber Day award will be given to some deserving person who has done university-community service; in addition, a scholarship would be given in the name of the winner of the Aber Day award. This way the concept of volunteer effort and public service will receive recognition and some financial reward. President Bowers has spent many years in service to this university and in many ways he has acted in positive ways, some of these will be mentioned at the awards ceremony. Giving recognition to those persons who contribute to the university is a quality that we, as students, need to emulate. Central Board, ASUM, has created this Aber Day award. If properly set into this tradition could be a strong addition.

So there will be many activities and a need for folks to contribute their energies to make this a great day. Calendars and posters will be out soon; meanwhile any folks, who would like to help, wanting to see this be a great Aber Day we'd like to invite you to get-together at the Grizzly, 5 p.m., Thursday. We'll go on from there.

If by chance we collect a large enough crew, we feel we could plant the university, clean up the river corridor adjacent to the campus plus clean up the remaining river corridor, as well as try to generate enthusiasm for a Missoula-wide litter clean-up. This would take a large crew but 6,000 folks would do nicely. Also a barbecue is being worked out for the day. If that happens, we could work and play all day, eat together, party that night both on campus and in town. Hope to see you at 5 p.m. at the Griz. Thanks.

No car control

Editor: I hear tell they is some commie pinko perverts out there who is trying to take away one of our most precious constitutional rights, the right to keep and drive our automobiles when and where we like. These mush-headed dogooders claim that just because 50,000 people is killed on the nation's highways each year, that is enough reason to try to impose car-control on every owner in America. These pointy-headed, intellectual liberals is trying to get laws passed to make every owner in the country register his car with the state government.

And they is not talking only about the ordinary family-passenger car. They want to include even those that is used just for sporting purposes and target practice, like the Saturday Night Specials being driven around Higgins and Main every weekend night. Next thing you know they will want to force everybody to take a test before they is allowed to drive their own car!

Our wise friends the "Ay-rabs" have an old proverb. They say you let the camel stick his nose under the flap, and next thing you know he has the whole tent. Same thing is true of this treasonous vehicle-control idea. Car registration is the first step to car confiscation. (Just ask anybody who ever got caught parking in a Missoula tow-away zone!)

The commie pinko perverts may be willing to register their automobiles, but not us true-blue, American patriots. Register my car? Sure, when you pry the steering wheel out of my cold, dead hand. Cars don't kill people; people kill people. Help stamp out vehicle registration! Remember, when cars is controlled, only the uncontrolled will have cars.

Whitie Day?

Editor: It was during the visit to this campus of David Duke that a person wrote to the Missoulian about the lack of a day for white people.

Well, as I see it, every day is Whitie Day for corporate America; if you look close enough you will see a lack of color in this corporate picture of America. If you want to look closer you find a lack of color in Montana state agencies.

For the large population of Native Americans in this state, there seems to be a lack of exposure in the professional ranks off the reservations.

No doubt there is an answer to this question. I have yet to have some one answer it.

UTU officers nominated

Richard Vandiver, chairman of the University of Montana sociology department, has been nominated next year's president of the University Teachers' Union.

The nominations for the 14 offices in the UTU were announced yesterday at a meeting attended by nine UTU members. Ballots will now be mailed to the about 200 faculty who are members of the UTU. Those elected will assume office in mid-May, following completion of negotiations for the new contract between the UTU and the Office of the Commissioner of Higher Education, according to Howard Reinhardt, current UTU president.

Vandiver, who runs unopposed, said yesterday his work load as president should be somewhat less than that of previous presidents because during his term there will be no legislative session, and only a limited amount of collective bargaining.

He'll "obviously" have to cut back on his criminology research, but Vandiver added that his position as sociology chairman has already taken time away from the research. He said he intends to spend more time with research after next year.

The offices and the candidates are:

- vice president; Philip Maloney, assistant professor of foreign languages.

- secretary; David Loughran, associate professor of foreign languages and Stewart Justman, assistant professor of English.

- treasurer; Bruce Bigley, assistant professor of English and Mark Behan, professor of botany.

- membership; Michael Kupilik, assistant professor of economics.

- program; Phillip Fandozzi, assistant professor of philosophy and Fred Henningsen, professor of accounting and finance.

- legislation; Karen Hatcher, associate professor of library sciences and Donald Winston, professor of geology.

- resolutions; Stephen McCool, associate professor of forestry and Robert Ream, associate professor of forestry.

- grievances; James Walsh, professor of psychology.

- publications; Kay Unger, assistant professor of economics.

- representative to the Montana Federation of Teachers; Richard Barrett, associate professor of economics.

- the three representatives to the Missoula Council of Trades and Labor; William Ballard, professor of mathematics; Richard Dunn, assistant professor of library sciences; and Richard Smith, professor of accounting and finance. All three run unopposed.

Bigley, Fandozzi, Walsh, Unger and Barrett all are running for re-election.

Sagebrush Rebellion discussed in Public Land Law Conference

The "Sagebrush Rebellion" in the West and its implications will be discussed by authorities on the subject tomorrow as part of the third annual Public Land Law Conference.

The conference, sponsored by the University of Montana law school, will be in the University Center Ballroom, 8:15 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

The Sagebrush Rebellion authorities will discuss the implications of energy and natural resources development, grazing, mining and access to public lands.

The conference will also include discussions on practical problems and proposed solutions regarding the management and use of the large portion of federally-held lands in the West.

Speakers and topics for the conference include:

- Frank Gregg, a consultant for the Conservation Foundation in Washington, D.C.; "The West and the Sagebrush Rebellion: Who Wins, Who Loses?"

- Lloyd Haight, Idaho's special deputy attorney general, specialist in natural resource law and former member of the U.S. Public Land Law Review Commission; "Why the Rebellion: A Balance of Power and Practicalities."

- Richard Shannon, UM professor of forestry; "Offspring of the Sagebrush Rebellion."

- John Baden, director of the Center for Political Economy and Natural Resources at Montana State University; "The Sagebrush Rebellion: A Dissenting Philosophy."

- Steven Freudenthal, former executive assistant to the Wyoming secretary of the interior; "Between the Horns of Dilemma: Energy Development and the Real World."

- Hugh O'Riordan, counsel for the Idaho Cattlemen's Association and Owyhee Cattlemen's Association; "Energy and Public Lands: A Tangle of Regulations."

- Luke Danielson, counsel for the National Wildlife Federation and assistant professor of law at the University of Colorado; "The Public Energy Resource: Concentration of Ownership and Balancing the Environment-Supply Equation."

The price of the conference is $3 for students. Registration begins at 8 a.m. in the UC Ballroom.

Protest planned over wilderness exploration

MISSOULA (AP) — A protest is planned here May 8 against oil and natural gas exploration in the Bob Marshall Wilderness.

Organized by the Bob Marshall Alliance, the protesters plan to march through downtown Missoula at noon, then gather for a rally in front of the Northern Region Forest Service office.

The idea, said pro-wilderness spokesman Bill Cunningham, is to demonstrate there is "still a great deal we can do to protect the Bob Marshall — simply because of the special meaning it has in the hearts and minds of many Montanans."

An application is pending at Northern Region headquarters to detonate 5,400 explosive charges along 207 miles of seismic lines in the Bob Marshall, Lincoln-Scapegoat and Great Bear wilderness areas.

Health fair to emphasize body limits, function, care

By Tim Rogers
Montana Kaimin Reporter

Want to find out just how healthy you really are? The second annual Western Montana Health Fair will be held Saturday and Sunday at Southgate Mall and could tell you the answer.

The fair will be from 10 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. on Saturday and from noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday.

The two-day event will feature exhibits and booths by 50 local, non-profit health agencies, according to Nancy Dusek, Five Valleys Health Care, Inc.

The health fair is designed to make people more aware of their bodies' function and limits. The prevention and detection of diseases, especially by senior citizens, also will be emphasized.

About 20,000 people attended the fair last year, so the sponsors decided to make it an annual event, Dusek said.

Anemia, vision, hearing and blood-pressure tests will be given by the Missoula City-County Health Department, along with help from the Radio Reading Service, Missoula County Nutrition Project, Foster Grandparents and the Retired Senior Volunteers Program.

Other exhibits will include computer diet analysis, lung-function tests and health-risk appraisals.

The University of Montana's physical therapy club will participate again this year, presenting an eight-minute videotape and handbooks on stretching, according to Gary Lusin, senior in physical therapy. The film focuses on "preventive stretching for athletic endeavors and other physical activities such as gardening," he said.

The club's booth will be manned by two junior or senior physical therapy students, working two-hour shifts. They will answer questions and conduct clinics for interested persons, Lusin said.

At last year's fair, the club presented a film and charts on lower-back pain, he added.

Sponsors for the fair include St. Patrick Hospital, Prudential Insurance Company, Southgate Mall and the Center for Continuing Education and Summer Programs.

Sect member admits guilt for beating death of child

WOLF POINT, Mont. (AP) — The murder trial of four members of a religious sect took a surprise turn yesterday when one of the defendants took the witness stand against his attorney's advice and claimed full responsibility for the beating death of 5-year-old James Gill.

Daniel Powers, 29, told the jury that he beat the child four times with a stick and an electrical cord and forced him into a cold shower three times Jan. 9 to discipline him for refusing to eat a sandwich.

The child died that night.

However, Special Prosecutor Marc Racicot accused Powers of trying to be a martyr for the purposes of protecting other members of the River of Life Tabernacle sect.

The state has charged seven members of the sect with deliberate homicide, contending that the sect sanctioned brutal discipline of children and that all the accused members either participated in or allowed beatings of the Gill boy.

Powers testified that the child was in "perfect health" before he beat him.

He said he did not realize that what he was doing would cause the boy's death, and that he now feels ashamed.

The boy's parents, Grady and Jennifer Gill, followed Powers to the witness stand to testify that they had never abused their son and had not seen the estimated 150 bruises and other injuries on his body until after his death the night of Friday, Jan. 9.

Color photographs of the boy's body introduced at the trial made him realize he was responsible for the death, Powers said.

Powers also contended that the technique of using cold showers and whippings with fiberglass sticks and electrical cords is not advocated by the sect. He said nobody in the church either preached it or advocated it.

He said he had not beaten his own children or put them in cold showers, but in trying to diaper train them he had dipped them in a river. He said he was unable to say where he got the idea of cold showers to discipline children.

Eight-year-old Justin Phillips, testifying for the prosecution Tuesday, said he had watched James' father, Grady Gill, Robert Poole and Powers beat James on the last two days of his life for refusing to eat.

'Exclusionary rule' bill bites legislative dust

HELENA (AP) — The Montana Senate yesterday ended chances for the next two years that Montana would become the first state in the nation to repeal the "exclusionary rule," a legal doctrine which prevents prosecutors from using evidence which has been obtained illegally.

The move by the Senate to override Gov. Ted Schwinden's veto of a bill repealing the rule fell two votes short of the two-thirds needed. It was the second attempt in two days by the Senate to put the bill onto the lawbooks over the governor's objections.

The House voted a comfortable 73-27 Tuesday to override the veto, in a surprise move led by Rep. Michael Keedy, D-Kalispell, sponsor of the bill. A short time later the same day, the Senate tried the same thing, but the effort fell one vote short on a vote of 33-17.

The second and final attempt to override the veto in the Senate failed yesterday on a vote of 32-18.

Sen. Thomas Towe, D-Billings, argued that the bill would run counter to the Fourth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, which prohibits unlawful searches and seizures.

Calling that amendment a "very sacred provision of our Constitution," Towe said it was fundamental to the American Revolution and this nation's independence — a response to the invasion of homes by British authorities.

But Sen. Bob Brown, R-Whitefish, Senate floor sponsor, argued that the bill would not destroy the Fourth Amendment, but only provided for a different and better method of enforcing it. He said it could stop some overly zealous police actions which occur now.

The exclusionary rule, developed from U.S. Supreme Court rulings, seeks to enforce the Fourth Amendment through suppression of evidence taken illegally, even if the evidence itself is valid and indicative of guilt.

Under Keedy's bill, enforcement would have come through sanctions against police officers who act unlawfully. That approach raised objections from many police sources in the state, but others said they did not fear the idea.

Sanctions would have included suspensions without pay, firing and liability for civil damages.

Brown and other supporters argued that the U.S. Supreme Court, especially Chief Justice Warren Burger, have been encouraging a new form of enforcing the Fourth Amendment protections on grounds that the exclusionary rule has primarily protected the guilty.

Sen. Fred Van Valkenburg, D-Missoula, a defense lawyer, contended that the Supreme Court has been moving in exactly the opposite direction.

Joggers may have heart attacks also HOUSTON (AP) — Internationally known heart surgeon Dr. Michael DeBaakey says such exercising as jogging will not prevent heart attacks.

DeBaakey, 72, says reasonable exercise is healthy "but it's not going to prevent you from having a heart attack."

Speaking before a group of businessmen Tuesday, DeBaakey said, "I don't have any strong objection to jogging for people who are relatively young, say, under 30."

"I do have some objections to joggers who get out in the middle of the street, especially at dusk or dawn when I've nearly run into them," he said. "I think that's dangerous."

Conrad, Palmer to file suit

MISSOULA (AP) — Missoula County Commissioners Germaine Conrad and Bob Palmer said yesterday they would file suit in state District Court in an attempt to have recall petitions filed against them declared invalid.

The commissioners contend the petitions should be invalidated by the county elections office because the contents are false and misrepresent the facts to the public.

They also say the legal foundations of the recall attempt are doubtful and there is a question of whether the recall can proceed while legal action on a closely related matter is pending.

This refers to the fact the county attorney's office is trying to charge them with violating the state open meetings law.

The petitions were circulated after the two commissioners were accused of meeting secretly to restructure county government.

The 'Premier American cocktail' may be extinct, scholar says

BOSTON (AP)—Lowell Edmunds is a classics scholar, author of "Chance and Intelligence in Thucydides," who has turned to writing about the classic American drink—the martini—which he says probably is "already extinct."

Edmunds says he's gotten some good-natured jibes from colleagues over his latest book, "The Silver Bullet: The Martini in American Civilization," and wonders why "should we only study high culture?"

Edmunds, a professor of classics first at Harvard and now at Boston College, says the martini, properly a balanced mix of gin and vermouth, is the "premier American cocktail." But because in today's world it tends to be just

"gin over ice... you could say it is already extinct."

Edmunds' martini can be either stirred or shaken, but the ice used must be from bottled water, not the tap. A silver of lemon is twisted over the glass, then discarded, never rubbed on the rim. And it should be served ice cold, but never on the rocks.

He describes a martini on the rocks as an "abomination... in the same class with fast foods, rock 'n' roll, snowmobiles, acid rain, polyester fabrics and super-market tomatoes."

Senate approves gas tax raise

HELENA (AP) — Many Republicans balked at the deals their leaders had agreed to, but the Montana Senate nonetheless gave final approval yesterday to several key tax bills.

Most controversial was a bill to raise gasoline taxes 4 cents a gallon and diesel fuel taxes 5 cents over the next two years, to raise $28 million for highway construction. Though it was part of the bipartisan "summit" agreement on tax and spending policy, the Republican majority nearly blocked its leaders' moves to get the bill out of the Taxation Committee.

The Senate also approved the final versions of two bills changing the way the oil industry is taxed. One measure raises oil severance taxes from 2.6 percent to 5 percent next year and 6 percent in 1984.

The other bill gives the industry a deduction for the federal "windfall profits" tax, enough according to state budget analysts to offset the increase in the oil severance tax.

The two bills effectively transfer about $52 million from federal and county governments to the state treasury. Some will be used to reduce taxes on autos; about $22 million will be up for grabs in what appeared likely to be a hectic final day.

news briefs—

By The Associated Press

Pesticides cause of fish kills in creek

The use of highly toxic, long-lasting pesticides to combat an outbreak of army cutworms has state wildlife officials fearful of fish kills and contamination of deer, antelope and game birds.

Al Elser, a state fisheries biologist at Miles City, said "quite a few" fish ranging from carp to suckers, minnows and bullheads—all non-game fish—were killed in Sunday Creek. Elser said he saw dead fish along a one-mile stretch of the creek not far from where it empties into the Yellowstone River near Miles City. Sunday Creek winds through wheat fields "and anyone spraying there couldn't miss the creek," Elser said. Cutworms poisoned by the insecticide crawled into the creek to die, he said.

Israel to fight plane sales to Saudis

Israel vowed yesterday to fight the sale of American radar planes to Saudi Arabia, claiming the all-seeing eyes in the sky would place an unbearable burden on Israeli defense.

A government statement expressed "profound regret and unqualified opposition" to President Ronald Reagan's decision, announced Tuesday, to sell five sophisticated radar reconnaissance planes to Saudi Arabia. The White House dropped its plans to send the proposal to Congress next Monday in hopes of averting a rejection there.

Deputy Defense Minister Mordechai Zippori called the plan "a very, very unpleasant decision" which Israel would appeal to the Reagan administration and to U.S. public opinion.

State may lose dam-licensing power

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission says it has the power to issue a license for the controversial Kootenai Falls Dam near Libby without permission from the state of Montana.

Randy Moy, director of the Facilities Siting Division of the state Department of Natural Resources and Conservation, said the state would go to court to prevent Northern Lights Inc., of Sandpoint, Idaho, from building the dam without a certificate from the Board of Natural Resources.

Thomas Dewitt of the commission's Division of Environmental Analysis said Tuesday that the Federal Power Act takes precedence over the state facility siting law.

Have You Ever Considered How
"Army Officer"
Would Look On Your Job Application?

As any army officer you shoulder greater responsibility far earlier than most other college graduates. That responsibility is leadership and it involves how to manage people, money, and material.

It's no wonder that many employers, looking for demonstrated leadership, rate "Army Officer" above most other qualifications.

This summer the department of military science is running a special On-Campus course that can qualify men and women as advanced military science students this coming fall. The department will tailor a program to meet your needs.

If you think you can qualify as an officer, and you want to work towards a degree and a commission at the same time, make an appointment with Major Matt Matlosz at 243-2681 or 4191 or drop by the Men's Gym at Room 103A.

No newspaper safe from liars, editor says

WASHINGTON (AP)—No newspaper is safe from hoax stories if a pathological liar joins its writing staff, Ben Bradlee, executive editor of the Washington Post, said yesterday.

Bradlee said no rule in the newsroom could have protected the newspaper from the fabricated story of an eight-year-old drug addict that won Post reporter Janet Cooke a Pulitzer Prize.

Cooke resigned her job and has declined to discuss the matter.

"One conclusion I've reached is that you cannot legislate, you cannot make a rule that is going to prevent, preserve you, save you from a pathological liar," Bradlee said at an American Society of Newspaper Editors' meeting.

"Eventually, you are going to have to trust somebody," Bradlee said. "If you have a rule that makes an editor check every single fact by every reporter, you are not going to put out a daily newspaper, you are going to put out a monthly newspaper."

Last week's disclosure that Cooke had invented the central character of her story and the Post returning her Pulitzer were the talk of the annual editors' convention.

"Everybody here today came looking for red meat," Al Jacoby, ombudsman of the San Diego Union, said. Other editors spoke of the opportunity "to beat up on Bradlee."

Bill Green, Post ombudsman whose lengthy explanation of how and why the story was published appeared in last Sunday's editions, joined a panel of ombudsmen at the convention.

Green wrote that the story "convulsed the city and humiliated the Washington Post—proud house of Watergate investigations. The story was a lie."

Bradlee, responding to questions from his seat in the audience, called "baloney" the suggestions that race and the Post's affirmative action program had something to do with the breakdown of the newspaper's internal checks in connection with the story.

"Where race came into this question has to do with the white editors," Bradlee said. "Editors have only a limited number of worlds in which they consider themselves well-qualified. In this case, Condon Terrace in southeast Washington is an area I do not know anything about."

"The fact that Janet was black and the fact that her immediate editor was black probably made me trust them more, not less... I considered them expert in this area," Bradlee said.

I oppose federal aid to education because no one has been able to prove the need for it.

Weather or Not

The broken phone-booth door clattered in the gusty wind like the shutters of a condemned house. Week-old newspapers rustled at Les' feet. He toed the comics section under the booth edge and watched it skitter past Tamara's house.

A few minutes after he left the and parked his car around the corner, Tamara and her green Porsche she bought with the alimony revved up the street, heading uptown. He knew she was lying about Eddie.

Les curled a sneering lip at the thought of Eddie, an aging, smelly punk with an arrest record high of 70 misdemeanors, a low of 38 parking tickets and partly cloudy skies. The thought of Eddie involved with the woman he once loved made Les cringe. Once loved, he repeated harshly to himself, swearing it was true. He wished for Tamara in handcuffs, guilty as charged, before a judge for sentencing, and the judge was him.

"Thirty years of celibacy," he muttered.

Les began to dial his office. "Or thirty years with me," he whispered into the receiver.

LINUS J. CARLETON UNDERGRADUATE SCHOLARSHIP

SCHOOL OF EDUCATION

The School of Education announces the Linus J. Carleton Scholarship Award to an undergraduate student of at least junior standing.

In order to be considered for the award, students must:

1. Be of junior standing.
2. Plan to enroll in a teacher certification program at the Univ. of Mont. for the 1981-82 academic year.
3. Make application through the School of Education Office. Selection is to be made by May 7, 1981.

• 2 p.m., student affairs, UC Montana Rooms.

Evaluation forms for the semifinalists will be distributed to any students, faculty or staff attending the meetings.

The evaluations will be reviewed by the presidential search committee and will have a "considerable" impact on its final recommendations to the Board of Regents next month, Margery Brown, associate dean of the UM law school and chairwoman of the committee, said yesterday.

The evaluation forms can either be given to a member of the search committee after the meeting or can be dropped off at Main Hall 313 within two days.

Brown said she sees the visits as a "two-way street" that will enable the semifinalists and the university to get acquainted.

The search committee, which released the names of the seven semifinalists last Wednesday, must submit no fewer than three recommendations to the regents who will select the successor to UM President Richard Bowers.

The new president should be chosen by late May, Brown said.

Bowen is a former president of USD and former South Dakota commissioner of higher education. He has been a foreign service officer with the U.S. State Department and has held staff positions in the U.S. Senate. He has a doctorate in political science from Harvard University and an additional bachelor's degree in history.

As chancellor of the Minnesota University System, Hays is chief executive and operating officer for a seven-university system. He was director of academic planning and curriculum development and vice chancellor for academic affairs. He has a doctorate in history.

A member of the Commission on Women in Higher Education, Hays has written and spoken widely for the advancement of women in administrative positions.

The other five presidential candidates will visit UM during the next four weeks.

Anti-paraphernalia bill signed by Schwinden

HELENA (AP) — Gov. Ted Schwinden has signed a bill outlawing the sale, advertising or possession of drug paraphernalia.

The law, which becomes effective

Oct. 1, makes it illegal to possess a long list of such paraphernalia as hashish pipes, water pipes, roach clips, miniature cocaine spoons and vials.

Also outlawed would be such common household items as spoons, blenders, bowls, balloons, envelopes and small scales, if those items are "used, intended for use or designed for use with dangerous drugs."

Violation of the law could subject a person to a $500 fine and a six-month jail term.

The delivery of such paraphernalia to a minor could result in a $1,000 fine and six-month jail term.
